HOW TO END POSTERIOR OSCULATION OF ISLAMISM

It is too much to expect that a man with three Moslem names wouldn't oppose Islamism.[1] But that doesn't mean that Western Civilization can't. Nonetheless, our civilization - which used to be called Christendom - cannot summon the will to do so.

Lately, we have been subjected to such a plethora of posterior osculation by libtard politicians and pundits of Moslem crazies that this is utterly undeniable. And it shows no sign of stopping unless we stop putting up with it.

There is a way to stop it, but first, let's do a review of recent events that exemplify what has to be stopped.

The MultiCulti capital of the world is Sweden. Having replaced Christianity with the religion of MultiCulturalism - all cultures are morally equal, none is better than any other except that Western Civilization is worse than any other - Swedish taxpayers provide the most generous welfare benefits on the planet to immigrants from the Moslem world whom they welcome in droves.

Of the 9 million people in Sweden, 1,350,000 of them are Moslem immigrants, or 15% of the population. That would be equivalent to 45 million Moslem immigrants in the US with most of them getting free housing and welfare checks. Last year, 2012, Sweden gracefully welcomed 103,000 more Moslems from places like Iraq, Syria, Somalia, and Afghanistan.

Last week, Swedes were repaid for their bottomless generosity with a solid week of Moslem rioting , setting hundreds of fires that burned down dozens of buildings and torched hundreds of cars. Note the BBC story manages to avoid identifying just who the rioting "youths" are or where these "immigrants" are from. Note also the BBC's description of Husby, the Stockhom suburb where the riots began, as "deprived." Deprived of what - more welfare?

As Moslems were violently rioting in Stockholm last week, on a street in the Woolwich district of southeast London on May 22, a British soldier, Lee "Riggers" Rigby, was butchered and hacked to death by two Nigerian Moslems in broad daylight yelling "Allahu Akbar!"

While millions of Brits were horrified and outraged by the butchery in the name of Islam, much of the media - like CNN - was far more concerned about a "backlash" towards Moslems.

A few days after Rigby's murder, it was revealed that there are thousands of YouTube terror videos encouraging Moslems to maim and kill non-Moslems. One of the worst hate-spewing mosques in Britain is in the village of Gillingham in Kent. On the Friday after the murder (5/24), seeing a number of Moslem immigrant men exiting the mosque, an 85 year-old lady yelled at them, "Go back to your own country!"

She was promptly arrested and put in handcuffs by the police for racially aggravated verbal abuse. There's no 1st Amendment in Britain. A number of Brits have now been arrested for making "offensive" comments on Islam on Twitter and Facebook.

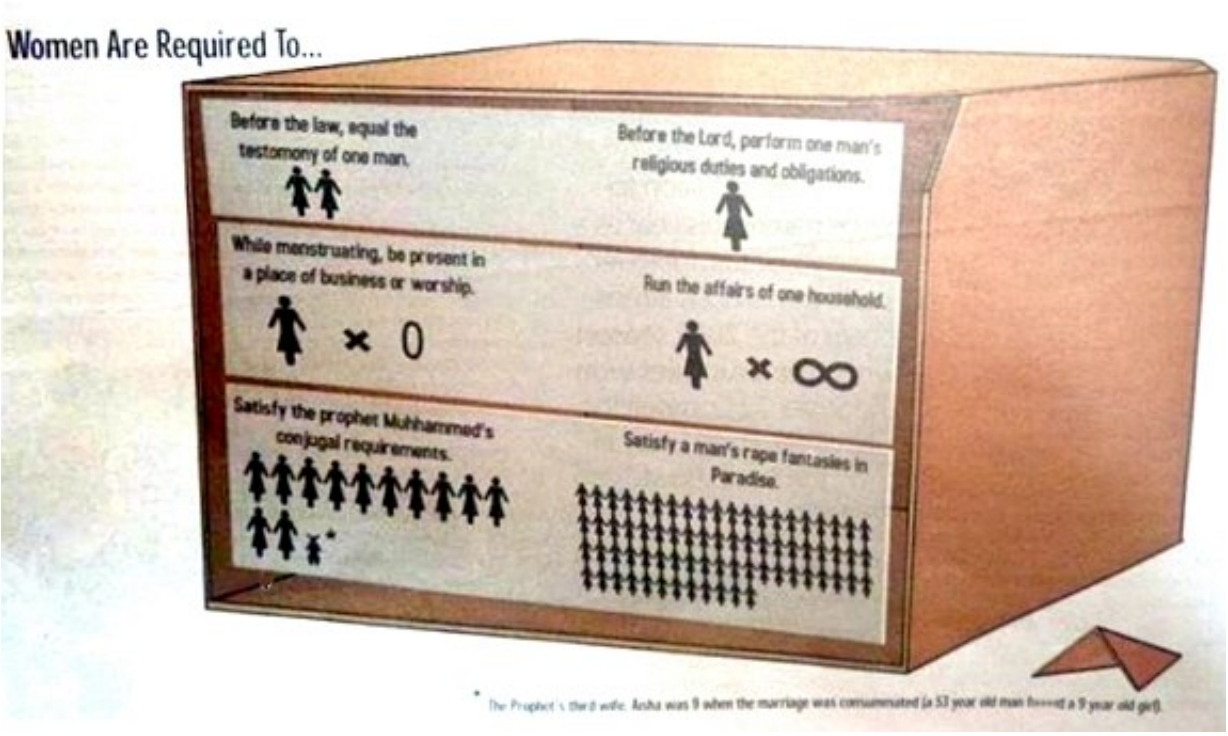
Now take a look at these two pictures, both from London's East End. The first is of St. Mary's Church during last Sunday's (5/26) services. The second is the outside of a nearby mosque too small to hold worshippers for Friday (5/24) prayers.

Note what few folks there are in the church are old folks. Note all the Moslems are men - women are not allowed.

We now travel down under to the capital of Oz, Canberra, to reflect on the recent travails of the ANU (Australia National University) campus newspaper, Woroni. Like kids everywhere, those at Woroni enjoy making fun of things and have been running an "Advice from Religion" series of cartoons satirizing religions.

The April edition satirized Jews, asking e.g., "Did Medianite women lead you to sexual sin?" If Yes, then "Exterminate them - but keep the virgins to indulge in sexual sin with: Numbers 31:15." Previous editions satirized Mormons, Catholics, and Scientologists. All ANU students who ascribe to these beliefs took it in good humor, did not make threats or lodge complaints, and there was nary a hint of disciplinary action by ANU authorities.

But in this month's May edition, the Woroni kids made a big mistake: they satirized Islam. And worse, they focused on one of its greatest vulnerabilities, how it treats women. Here is Woroni's "Advice from Religion" cartoon on Islam, entitled "In Islam, Women Are Required To:"



The graphic represents numbers of women. It takes two women to "Before the (Islamic) law, equal the testimony of one man"; it takes 12 women and one little girl to "Satisfy Mohammed's conjugal requirements"; while it takes 72 women to "Satisfy a man's rape fantasies in Paradise."

The little girl graphic is asterisked with a footnote: "The Prophet's third wife Aisha was 9 when the marriage was consummated (a 53 year old man f'ed a 9 year old girl)."

Campus Moslems erupted with threats and demands. Instantly, Vice-Chancellor Ian Young denounced Woroni as being "offensive and discriminatory." He did not say Woroni made any false statements about Islam. He called the Woroni editors into his office, threatened them individually with expulsion, demanded an official apology and retraction, as well as deleting the "Islamophobic" cartoon from its website. Here is Woroni's account of the demands.

The Woroni kids capitulated, of course. They expressed, albeit grudgingly - give them credit for that - regret for not expressing "balance and tact." Nowhere did they defend themselves by asserting what they said, e.g., about Mohammed in his 50s having sex with a nine year old child, is true (i.e., in all officially accepted accounts of his life by devout Moslems).

Yet another opportunity lost. If I were one of those Woroni kids, I would have looked at the ANU mandarins' demands as an opportunity on a silver platter to expose Mohammadan[2] hypocrisy, ANU cowardice, and to kick both in the cojones.

For there's the solution: stand up and kick Moslem intimidation right in the groin. The place to do so is on college campuses. If you want to change the culture, there's where to do it. Where do you think the Sixties got started?

Kids, college kids, are young so they feel invulnerable. They love nothing more to make fun of authority. They're the ones who can have the moxie to do what needs to be done: ridicule Islamic vulnerabilities to the moon - on women, slavery, child molestation, jihadism, intolerance, hatred of Jews & Christians, apostasy, on and on - and welcome threats and intimidation as an opportunity to publicize your ridicule as truthful.

This is the perfect time to encourage any college kid you know with the brains to be conservative to start writing for his campus paper. He or she will have such an enormous target-rich environment to work in - starting with Zero. He is losing his golden aura so fast now that master satirist P.J. O'Rourke sees now's the moment to point out how Stupid he is.

P.J. had a field day with Zero's idiotic claim, in his National Defense University speech (5/23) that "the core of al Qaeda...is on the path to defeat." Right. "Meanwhile," P.J. observed, "the core of al Qaeda, its aims and its beliefs, is also on the path to Boston and London and any number of other places."

Maybe, P.J. speculates, Zero is merely trying to be stupid. But no, he concludes, Zero doesn't have to try, he just is:

"Dopey stimulus, obtuse bailout, noodle-headed Obamacare, half-wit Dodd-Frank, damfool IRS Tea Party crashers, AP and Fox News beset by oafish peeping Toms and the Benghazi tale told by an idiot. One could go on. Stupid is a great force in human affairs. And the great force has a commander in chief."

Perception, especially in politics and culture, is reality. If the long-range drivers of perception (we're still suffering from the Sixties fifty years later, remember) are in college, if college kids start regarding Zero as a joke, he is. If they regard Islamism as worthy of ridicule, it is.

If we want a Cultural Revolution, it has to begin with college kids. And there's no better place for it to start than to stand up to Mohammedan bullying and campus administrative cowardice through ridicule. Especially if they can see it's so much fun to do so.

You know what to do now - send this to every college kid you know (your kids, your grandkids, those of your friends, et al). Be a part of ending our culture's posterior osculation of Islam. And don't be surprised when those kids who end it end up appreciating the glory of our culture, of Christianity and Western Civilization.

[1] Swahili, the lingua franca of Kenya and East Africa, originated as the language of the Moslem Arab-Persian slave traders in Zanzibar. "Barack" in Swahili means "Blessed," from the same word in Arabic; "Hussein" is a common Moslem name for a boy, meaning "handsome" in Arabic and after the grandson of Mohammed, Hussein the son of Fatimah (Mohammed's daughter) and Ali (the son of Mohammed's uncle); "Obama" is a Swahili word of Persian origin, meaning "He (Allah) is always with us." Zero's great-grandfather (if Barack Hussein Obama Sr. really was his birth father) was from the Luo tribe which is predominantly Christian. The Luos named those, like the g-grandfather, who converted to Islam "Obama" because the word also happens to mean "crooked" or "twisted" in the Luo language.

[2] Not long ago, Moslems were known as Mohammedans, followers of Mohammed. Somehow this is pejorative now, with the phony claim that it means worship of a man, not Allah. But it just means follower of the teachings of this guy, like, Calvinist means follower of Calvin's theology, not worship of John Calvin. Thus TTP will now refer to Moslems - also somehow a now-unacceptable spelling - alternatively as Mohammedans.
